

Rebecca Speyer

Rebecca Speyer currently serves as a Project Manager in Biometrics Services at eClinical Solutions. Originally from Los Angeles, she earned a BA in Public Health from the University of California, Berkeley. Her passion for public health began in her undergraduate years, during which she contributed as a research assistant at the Center for Environmental Research and Children's Health (CERCH). Since her graduation, Rebecca has been actively engaged in the clinical research sector, concentrating on the operationalization and oversight of various clinical research trials, including Investigator-Initiated Trials, Master Protocols, and Platform Trials. Armed with an advanced degree in Public Health, her primary goal is to facilitate the seamless translation of research findings into evidence-based strategies for population policy and public health initiatives. Rebecca currently lives in Santa Monica, California with her fiancé, Noah. In her free time, she enjoys practicing yoga, cooking innovative meals, and spending time with her family.
